A LITTLE BIT OF HISTORY

Voice Writing 101

The Voice Writing 101 program is a rebirth of part of my former court reporting curriculum. It has been reformatted for a number of reasons. The main reason being the growing shortage of court reporters and the opportunities for education and training being few and inadequate. The fast-paced, upward trend in technology and its evolution warrants a new level of training. Additionally, there seems to be an increase in the number of machine writers interested in cross training themselves on the voice writing method.

ABOUT ME

Jennifer “Jen” L. Thompson, CCR, CVR-M

I have been in the legal industry since 1987, where I began my legal career as a paralegal. I went on to become a court reporter in 1993. With voice writing schools being few and the need being great, I co-founded the first voice writing court reporting school in South Carolina in 2000.

For close to three decades, I have served the profession as a court reporting firm owner, court reporting instructor, and freelance court reporter. I am a Certified Verbatim Reporter - Master with the National Verbatim Reporters Association, as well as a Certified Court Reporter with the state of Georgia.

I have served in numerous leadership capacities, including President of the SC Court Reporters Association, and I'm a long-standing member of NVRA, SCCRA, and GCRA.

Known as one of the court reporting industry experts and leaders in voice recognition, I conduct private training as well as online webinars and programs. I'm a certified advanced EclipseVox™ trainer and frequently speak and present at technology seminars and association conferences.

WHO CAN BENEFIT FROM VOICE WRITING 101

- Those individuals who are currently working reporters or newly graduated and possess reporting experience and/or training interested in honing their skills and adding voice-to-text technology to their skill set.
- Those individuals who currently utilize a steno machine as their method of input desiring to cross train on voice writing.
- Those individuals who are interested in getting into the court reporting profession may add the Court Reporting Practice & Procedure Module to the curriculum. This is a basic, generic introduction to court reporting practices and procedures. The training is not state specific and the trainee is encouraged to seek further guidance from their respective state and other working reporters. (This is still currently under development and is slated for launch in February 2023)

THE PROGRAM

The program as designed will focus on the theory and method of voice writing, working with a speech recognition engine (SRE), Dragon Professional Individual, and speed building in preparation for the skills portion of NVRA certification. Those wishing to segue into training with a CAT system will continue with the EclipseVox A-Z™ program.

WHAT YOU'LL LEARN

The Voice Writing 101 course objective is to provide the trainee with a comprehensive training and understanding of the theory and method of voice writing as well as the theory of voice writing, the components of successful voice writing, and dictation technique.

The trainee will gain the foundation necessary for work with voice-to-text technology and customizing Dragon speech recognition software for individual use.

A speed building component will aid in honing the trainee's dictation skills while gradually improving speed and accuracy in order to meet national certification requirements.

VOICE WRITING 101

- Length: The Voice Writing 101 is six (6) weeks of live virtual instruction. The speed building path is 90-day access to Realtime Coach™, a learning management system, which will be monitored with provided feedback and guidance.
